

HANNAH GROCE

Occupation: Affordable Housing Policy Fellow

My education and qualifications are as follows: Because I was fortunate enough to grow up in Alameda with strong support, I had the opportunity to attend college and then return home to give back to the community I love. I feel a responsibility to ensure that our city remains healthy and stable for the next generation. As a matter of community health and safety, housing must be equitably accessible and affordable for every resident. We must continue to improve pedestrian and bicycle infrastructure while mitigating neighborhood traffic. Alameda, especially, must be preparing for the impacts of climate change. The challenge of protecting our community and shoreline will take substantial resources and long-term planning. Neighborhoods feel unheard and are surprised to learn decisions were made without their knowledge or input. It's the City's responsibility to proactively engage, inform, and solicit feedback with critical conversations to weigh our options and work toward solutions. Over the last decade, I've established a reputation for collaboration, respectful engagement, and problem-solving. I've spent years impacting housing—regionally and countywide; I have the courage and experience to address housing insecurity and affordability. I'm optimistic and committed to providing the foundation we need to meet the challenges ahead. I respectfully ask for your vote. Hannah4Alameda.com
